From Sonata Software - The Platformation Company

Which processes should enterprises automate with RPA for quicker time-to-value realization?

For Enterprises, performing efficiently means being able to sense and respond to ever changing market dynamics, give employees the tools they need to be productive, and ensure that customer experiences are flawless. Enterprises that need to continuously perform need to work towards eradicating the non-value added work and RPA enables to achieve the desired performance outcomes.

RPA deals with simpler types of task. It removes mainly physical tasks that don't need knowledge, understanding, or insight, the tasks that can be done by codifying rules.

The most important consideration to adopt RPA is for strategy, it can be used tactically for cost reduction such as head count reduction in transactional processes and also enabling better quality and compliance for the processes.

From the implementation perspective RPA is amenable to pilot to validate a business case since it plugs in at transactional levels without altering the business process steps
